Section 1: Lead Response and Nurturing (20 Prompts)

This section focuses on speed, personalization, and value-adds to convert passive web leads into active clients. The prompts are designed to generate responses that feel human, not robotic, while maintaining professional boundaries.

1. Immediate Zillow Response (Speed & Value)

* Prompt: "Act as a top-tier real estate agent in [City Name]. Write a 50-word SMS response to a new Zillow lead inquired about a 3-bedroom home. Do not ask for a call. Instead, offer to send a 'Neighborhood Guide' PDF immediately via email or text. Keep the tone warm, professional, and low-pressure."

* Template:

Hi [Lead Name], thanks for checking out [Address]! I'm [Agent Name] from [Brokerage]. Before we jump on a call, I have a free "Neighborhood Guide" for [Area] with school ratings and top restaurants. Want me to send that over via text or email now?

2. The "No-Call" Follow-Up (Day 2)

* Prompt: "Write a follow-up email to a lead who has not replied to my initial text. Provide three options: a quick 2-minute phone chat, a video tour link, or a price analysis of similar homes. Use a subject line that creates curiosity but no urgency. Keep it under 100 words."

* Template:

Subject: Quick question about [Address]

Hi [Lead Name], I know you're busy. Instead of a long call, would you prefer I send a video walkthrough of the main living areas, or a breakdown of what similar homes sold for last month? Let me know which is more helpful, and I'll send it over.

3. Re-Engaging Cold Leads (The "Value Drop")

* Prompt: "Create a re-engagement email for a lead who went quiet 6 months ago. Do not ask if they are still looking. Instead, share a specific market insight about their desired area (e.g., inventory drop) and attach a one-page cheat sheet on 'How to Negotiate in a Low-Inventory Market.'

Tone: Informative and helpful."

* Template:

Hi [Lead Name], I noticed the inventory in [Neighborhood] just dipped by 15% this month. Since you were interested in this area, I attached a quick guide on how to stand out as a buyer when choice is limited. No pressure to buy--just wanted to make sure you had the data to make smart decisions.

4. The "Is It Too Late?" Check-In

* Prompt: "Write a short, casual SMS to a lead who hasn't responded in 30 days. Acknowledge that things get busy. Ask if their timeline has shifted or if they'd like to pause our communications. Give them an easy 'out' to keep the relationship intact."

* Template:

Hi [Lead Name], just checking in! If your home search has paused or your timeline has shifted, no worries at all. Just let me know if you'd like me to stop sending updates, or if you'd prefer to keep the door open for when you're ready.

5. First Response to Multiple Listing Inquiries

* Prompt: "A lead has inquired about three different listings. Write a response that acknowledges all three but focuses on one key differentiator for each. Ask which specific feature (e.g., backyard, commute, kitchen) is the most important to them to help narrow the search."

* Template:

Hi [Lead Name], thanks for your interest in [List 1], [List 2], and [List 3]. They are quite different: [List 1] has the best backyard, [List 2] is closest to the highway, and [List 3] has the modern kitchen. To help me prioritize, which of those three features is non-negotiable for you?

6. The "Ghost" Text (Day 3)

* Prompt: "Write a 2-sentence text message to a lead who hasn't replied to two previous attempts. Use a light, humorous tone referencing the 'black hole' of inboxes. Offer to send information via a link instead of email to reduce friction."

* Template:

Hi [Lead Name], I suspect my emails are getting lost in the cosmic void of your inbox! ? To make it easier, I can send the listing details via a simple link that opens in any browser. Want me to send that over?

7. Buyer Lead: Pre-Qualification Soft Ask

* Prompt: "Draft an email to a new buyer lead that explains why understanding their budget is critical before viewing homes. Frame it as 'protecting their time' rather than a financial interrogation. Include a link to a soft budget calculator tool."

* Template:

Hi [Lead Name], to ensure we only show you homes you can actually afford (and love), I'd like to run a quick budget check. This isn't about credit scores; it's about matching your monthly payment comfort to the right price range. Here is a 2-minute calculator link. Once we have that range, I can start curating a list.

8. Seller Lead: Initial Consultation Offer

* Prompt: "Write a response to a seller lead who asked 'How much is my house worth?' Do not give a number. Explain that values depend on recent comparable sales and condition. Offer a free 'Pre-Listing Audit' which includes a CMA and a list of low-cost prep tips."

* Template:

Hi [Lead Name], great question! A precise value depends on the last 90 days of sales and your home's specific condition. I can't give you a number over text, but I can offer a free Pre-Listing Audit. It includes a detailed CMA and a checklist of $500-or-less fixes that typically add $5k+ to your sale price. Can we schedule 15 minutes this week?

9. The "Just Listed" Lead Response

* Prompt: "A lead inquired about a home that was just listed. Write a response that creates mild FOMO (Fear Of Missing Out) by mentioning that 'several agents have already viewed it.' Offer to send a 'Must-See At' checklist to help them decide if it's worth a visit."

* Template:

Hi [Lead Name], thanks for reaching out about [Address]. It's a beautiful property, and we've already had a few local agents view it this morning. If it fits your needs, I recommend moving quickly. I can send you a 'Must-See' checklist highlighting the pros and cons so you can decide if it's worth a trip.

10. Re-Engaging Past Sellers (Yearly)

* Prompt: "Write a holiday/seasonal greeting email to past seller clients. Do not ask for business. Instead, include a 'Home Maintenance Seasonal Checklist' for their next season (e.g., fall leaf removal, winter furnace check). End with a soft referral mention."

* Template:

Hi [Client Name], hope your season is going well! I'm sending over our annual [Season] Home Care Checklist to help keep your property in top shape. It's a quick read. Also, if any friends or neighbors are thinking about moving, I'd love to help them as I did for you. No pressure, just a friendly reminder.

11. The "Ballpark" Follow-Up

* Prompt: "A lead asked for a 'ballpark' price. Write a follow-up that gently educates them on why ballparks are misleading (comps vary by square footage, condition, lot size). Offer a 'Range Report' instead of a single number."

* Template:

Hi [Lead Name], I appreciate the quick question! 'Ballpark' figures can be tricky because a home

500 sq ft larger or with a renovated kitchen can have a 20% higher value. Instead, I can send you a

'Value Range Report' showing the low, mid, and high ends based on the last three sales. Would that be helpful?

*12. Lead Who Wants to "Just Browse"**

* Prompt: "Write a response to a lead who says they aren't ready to buy but want to see prices. Validate their approach. Offer to set up an automated 'Price Drop Alert' for their search criteria so they stay engaged without pressure."

* Template:

Hi [Lead Name], that's a smart approach! Watching the market is key. I can set up a personalized

'Price Drop Alert' for your criteria. You'll get an email only when a new home hits the market or an active listing drops in price. Want me to set that up for you?

13. The "Who Are You?" Clarification

* Prompt: "Write a polite but firm response to a lead who replied with 'Who is this?' after a text. Reintroduce yourself, your agency, and the specific reason for the contact (their recent inquiry). Do not apologize profusely; stay professional and clear."

* Template:

Hi [Lead Name], this
